

One Georgia Bank to Implement iLumen's Financial Monitoring and Benchmarking Service

Delivering High-Touch Customer Support through Leading-Edge Technology

ATLANTA, GA, June 26, 2005

iLumen, Inc. and One Georgia Bank, both located in Atlanta, Georgia, today jointly announced that One Georgia Bank will implement iLumen's financial monitoring and benchmarking service to support their growing customer base of small and mid-size businesses.

"Atlanta's rapidly expanding, diverse business community provides the ideal environment to launch real 'relationship' banking to small and mid-sized companies," said Willard "Chuck" Lewis, Chief Executive Officer of One Georgia Bank. "By implementing iLumen's financial monitoring and benchmarking service as a standard business practice, we will be able to deliver superior service to small and mid-sized businesses in Atlanta that have been underserved for too long."

"One Georgia Bank is dedicated to providing a high-touch customer experience and understands the importance of technology to enhance customer interactions," said Robert H. Woosley, Co-founder and Chief Executive Officer of iLumen. "By implementing iLumen's service, One Georgia Bank is furthering their commitment to providing their customers with up-to-date technology that not only adds value but simplifies their total banking experience."

"iLumen will provide us with the technology to quickly respond to our customers' unique borrowing needs, easily access their financial data and reduce overhead so we can offer competitive rates," said Lewis. "Our business customers simply submit their financial information electronically to us through a secure website where they can then view trending information on their respective business and access comparative industry trending information through the iLumen Financial Network."
